

Clean Team

With the Winter fund raising season well and truly underway, it was time, again, for the cadets and staff of 134 (Bedford) Squadron Air Training Corps to fill their buckets, grab sponges and squeegees and hold yet another successful charity car wash.

With 26 cadets participating in the activity, there were plenty of willing hands available on what was one of the busiest car washing days of the year.

Approximately 78 cars were washed during the day raising an impressive £350.50 towards the Squadron funds.

Whilst waiting for their cars to be cleaned to perfection, customers were given a guided tour of the brand new Cadet Centre by Cadet Luke Taylor, 15 years. The customers were also treated to complimentary refreshments and homemade cake.

The activity was once again supported by Autoglym Limited, the leading supplier of car cleaning products.

Sergeant James Tye, who was responsible for the activity said, "This was our second winter car washing event and it proved to be the busiest yet. We had many new customers and they were all impressed with the efforts of the cadets and the facilities within the new Cadet Centre."
